United Press Telegram.
NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Mayor Caynor and his police last night made a haul on a gilded palace, just off Broadway, where a party of about 200 men and women, including District Attorney Whitman, were engaged in a party.

Whitman is a candidate for re-election on the fusion ticket which is fighting Caynor.

Inspector Dwyer caught a party when one of his men accused District Attorney Whitman of being a party to the party.

Whitman, who was in the party, was running him out of the restaurant when he recognized the district attorney.

"Excuse me, Mr. Whitman, I didn't recognize you," the officer began when Dwyer caught sight of the official.

"Get the hell out of here," shouted the inspector. Then he recognized the district attorney.

Whitman, who was in the party, was running him out of the restaurant when he recognized the district attorney.

"Take all of the numbers you can," Whitman informed the group.

"What are you doing?" asked one of the men.

"We are going to get the warrants," Whitman said.

"Never mind about warrants. I'll get them," Whitman said.

"All you have to do is to get numbers," Whitman said.

Governor Sulzer Holds to His Job;
Glynn Makes No Move to Take Charge

United Press Telegram.
ALBANY, Aug. 14.—The issue in the attempt to remove William Sulzer, chief executive of the state of New York, was framed today. In the presence of a large crowd that filled every available part of the executive offices, Governor Sulzer accepted service of the impeachment.

As he was accepting the impeachment, Governor Sulzer saw Lieutenant Governor Glynn passing his door quickly, as the latter made his way to his office on the floor above. Glynn refused to make a statement relative to what his position in the coming contest will be.

"This is a very serious case," he said, "and nothing should be done to disturb the great old state until something turns up requiring attention of the executive, I'll make no move."

ACCUSE GRANDSON AS VANDAL WHO SLASHED THE HARNESS

Meyersdale Police Claim They Have Solved Mystery of Wagonman's Mysterious Mischief.

Special to The Courier.
MEYERSDALE, August 14.—The police allege they have captured the vandal who has on three different occasions slashed the harness of John Wagonman.

The 14-year-old grandson of Mr. Wagonman is being held, accused of the act. Policeman T. R. Cramer, hiding in the Wagonman barn, declared he caught the youngster about to slash the harness over more, and alleges that the lad confessed. Although implicating others, the boy has so far refused to identify them.

For some weeks past Mr. Wagonman has had three sets of harness cut to ribbons, but efforts to locate the guilty party failed. Yesterday morning, the police, with Policeman Cramer's first watch in the barn, and was confronted by Policeman Cramer as he opened the door to a stall. The policeman took a large knife from the boy. The big blade measured more than 12 inches.

The boy says he was cutting the harness by his companions, but that he did not slash it all three times.

SCHAFER FUNERAL

Scottish Man Who Died Suddenly
Special to The Courier.

SCOTTSBURGH, Aug. 14.—The funeral of Louis Edward Schaffer, who died suddenly from neuritis of the heart, while at his farm near Dawson, will take place from the family residence, 120 Fourth avenue, Hamilton, on Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Decceased was born in Hamilton, July 11, 1845. He married Eliza Ann Schaffer, and the family moved to Scotland, where they lived for many years.

Mr. Schaffer was master mechanic for the Scotland and Old Scotland mills of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company for many years. About three years ago he retired to a farm he bought near Dawson.

During his lifetime Mr. Schaffer took an interest in the town, serving as school director for seven years and also serving as a member of the borough council. He was a member of the First Baptist Church, and of the Royal Arcanum and the National Protective Legion.

Mr. Schaffer is survived by his wife and the following grown children: Walter L. Schaffer, president of the Scotia Hotel, Scotia, N. Y.; George Schaffer, owner of the Scotia Hotel, Scotia, N. Y.; Mary, wife of William Enos of Scotia; Laura, wife of George Rushing of Youngstown, O.; Stella, at home; Esther, wife of W. E. Kelly of Scotia; Hattie, at home; and Frank of Youngstown, O.

Growth of Washington Office $100,000
Special to The Courier.

DETROIT, August 13.—Manager Clark Griffith of the Washington team, within three days will make an offer of $100,000 for Ty Cobb to Detroit. Griffith stated positively today that he has been authorized by the management of his team to make the offer for the Georgia Peach, and he is confident that Savin will accept.

Griffith will hold a conference with Savin this afternoon before the game begins.

SEEKS HIS BOY.
C. M. Rainey is searching for his young son, who disappeared from his home in South Connellville last evening at 5:30 o'clock. The boy left the house without saying where he was going, and when he failed to return, members of the family became alarmed.

City hall was notified of the disappearance, and officers are today keeping a watch for him.

Pharmacist is Killed.
NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Shallin and outwardly cheerful, Porter Chas. ton, Lake Como wife-murderer, said this morning on the steamer "The Italy" for Italy. When the boat reached its destination in 13 days, "Charlie" will be taken in Como, there to stand trial for the murder.

B. & O. INNOVATION ON EXCURSION TRAIN
IS RESTAURANT CAR*Day Coach Passengers to At-tantic City May Buy
Food.*FIRST TRIAL IS MADE TODAY*Experiment Will Also be Continued on the Day-Coach Train of Two Weeks Hence; Migrant Party of Benson Boards the Three Trains Here.

Restaurant cars, where day-coach passengers may obtain food is the latest innovation of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The experiment was given its first trial today on the day-coach excursion train between Pittsburg and Atlantic City. The restaurant car is an ordinary coach along which has been arranged a long counter. Passengers may purchase sandwiches, eggs and other delicacies. The prices are moderate and the excursion car is conducted along the line of a modern dairy ranch.

Among those who boarded the excursion car were George F. Sellers, at the local station, explained that the restaurant car is being tried to meet a demand on the part of travelers to eat and the day-coach train is charged on the dinner.

"We have found that few day-coach passengers patronize the dining cars. Although the prices are not exorbitant, by any means, the fact that it is not necessary to ride in a Pullman to enjoy a meal at cafe prices on the dinner," he said.

The restaurant car will also be on the Atlantic City day-coach excursion train of two weeks hence. No dinner is served on this train and in the past the passengers have either carried their lunches or bought sandwiches and coffee along the route, a not entirely satisfactory arrangement either for them or the railroad.

Today's excursion trains took more people to the beach than in any season. With the exception of those who made Pullman reservations, nearly all passengers out of Connellsville were taken on the regular train on the morning of the excursion.

There were two special trains. One was made of eight Pullman coaches and the other was made up of 19 day-coaches.

Among those who boarded the train this morning were Mr. and Mrs. John Irwin, Mrs. Pearl Norton and two children, Mrs. E. T. Norton and children, Miss Myrtle Irwin, Miss Gertrude Cyphor, Mr. and Mrs. W. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crowley, Miss Sarah McEliff, Miss Grace Pearson, Miss Bertha Cunningham, Miss Daise and Ann Kate Traylor, Miss Mary Higgins, Miss Lucy Donnelly, Miss Lillian Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Fair, Miss Hilda Robinson, all of town; Miss Halsey, Broad Ford; Miss Margaret Irwin, Greenburg; Miss Mabel Curt, Fort Marion; Miss Inez Conner, Chester; Miss Pearl Swamy, Fairchance; Miss Clara Davis, Smithfield; E. Linton, G. Bunkel, G. E. Newland, Fort Marion, and E. H. Wells, Morgantown. Mr. and Mrs. Martin King and daughter Mary Katherine, Miss Alice Newcomer and Miss Mary Elizabeth Penn will leave tonight.

PROTEST IS FILED.
Pittsburg Steel Formally Complains
Against 55-cent Rate.

WASHINGTON, August 11.—The Pittsburg Steel Company has filed a protest with the Interstate Commerce Commission against the proposed 77-cent rate for carrying iron ore from lower lake ports to the Pittsburg district.

The protest claims the 55-cent rate is a minimal and insufficient reduction from the present rate of 56 cents on direct ore.

HOLD REUNIONS.
Cotton and the Freed Families Gather in County.

Members of the Cotton family from all over Fayette county and more distant points are attending the annual reunion of the Cotton clan which is being held today at the Dawson race track. All kinds of amusements have been arranged and from all indications the reunion will go down in the history of the association as the largest and best ever held.

The Robert Freed family at Penna-ville is the scene of a large gathering of the Freed family today, the occasion being the annual reunion. A feature of the day was an elaborate dinner served at noon from well filled baskets prepared by the women.

PUNISHMENT.

Officers of Britain's Crack Regiment
Coming for Unveiling of Braddock Shaft

For the first time since the Revolutionary War, officers of the Coldstream Guards, the most famous British regiment of the British Army, are to visit this country. Early next October the dedication of the monument to General Braddock in Braddock Memorial Park along the National Pike, will bring the officers here. No private of the famous regiment may leave England on a peace mission, but the officers are permitted after securing proper authority.

Three of the best known officers of the command will visit this country for the monument unveiling. These officers are: Colonel Monck, present commander of the regiment, Colonel Hon W. Lambton, who was commander of the regiment, but retired recently; General Sir A. E. Cochrane, a field officer of the British army, the general in command of the London district. General Edward Braddock belonged to the guards.

It is expected that other officers of the Coldstream Guards will accompany the three already looked to attend the dedication, but as yet no advice to that effect have been received by those in charge of the exercises. The British Army Council has granted leave of absence to the three officers and this action has also been approved by King George.

Initiations have just been sent out for the dedication which is scheduled to take place October 15. At the monument of Vermont granite at General Braddock's grave is nearing completion and the bronze tablets which will be placed on it will be finished in time for the event.

The Coldstream Guards are especially interested in the coming monument dedication because they are furnishing the four great bronze tablets to adorn the memorial. Some years ago there was formed in Uniontown an organization known as the Braddock Memorial Park Association for the purpose of purchasing the plot of ground where General Braddock is buried. It is probable that Braddock's remains will never be removed to Westminster Abbey. The monument will cost between $5,000 and $6,000.

The arrangement committee for the monument unveiling are making elaborate preparations for the event which will be made a national one in scope. It is expected that President Woodrow Wilson, Governor John K. Tener of Pennsylvania and Sir Cecil Spring Rice, British Ambassador to the United States, will attend the dedication.

The committee also has assurances from General Wilfred Powell, counsel general at Philadelphia, that he will be present at the unveiling exercises. Other notables have accepted tentatively. These include: General Sir A. E. Cochrane, British vice consul in Pittsburg. It is expected that the three English army men will be entertained extensively during their stay.

SEVEN HUNDRED TO WEST PENN PICNIC
AT OAKFORD PARK*Thirteen Crowded Cars Carry Employees to the Excursion Grounds.*WEATHER FAVORS THE EVENT

Second Day's Outing of Big Trolley Company's Workers is Larger Than First, Largely Because There Was No Rain to Mar the Program.

The second day's outing of West Penn employees at Oakford Park today was more largely attended than the excursion of Tuesday. Thirteen cars were used in transporting the large crowd, 10 of them leaving Connellsville and Dunbar, and three from Uniontown. This was because the weather was favorable. The downpour that fell Tuesday morning as the cars were departing was missing.

Day men of the transportation department and the power department, together with the office forces from Connellsville and Hixburg, are enjoying the outing. It is estimated that fully 750 are at the park.

Before the cars left, large banners bearing the inscription, "West Penn Picnic," were strung across them. The banners were painted red.

The program of events for the day's amusements is a duplicate of that of Tuesday. The "West Penn Girl" is on the grounds with her $25,000 prize awaiting the arrival of the bright young man who will salute her with the assertion "You are the West Penn Girl." The day men are determined that the young lady will not be so successful in eluding her pursuers as was Miss Myrtle Washburn on Tuesday.

The feature of the afternoon will be a baseball game between the power department and the plant office employees. The game will begin at 2 o'clock.

Bill Anderson's "Angel Band" is present, rendering concerts wherever it can obtain a hearing, while Kiefer's augmented orchestra is furnishing the music for dancing at the pavilion. The waiters are being kept busy with the refreshments. Several dancers of extraordinary ability have entered for the event and friendly rivalry is manifested as to the outcome.

DIRECTORS CHANGE FRONT

Expected to Meet Demands of Fourth Parents Tonight.

Symptoms of weakening on the part of the School Board, which has been determined to send the Fourth ward boys of the sixth and seventh grades to the South Side school, is manifest today, and at tonight's special meeting the board may rescind its action.

Following a meeting of the property committee yesterday afternoon, the directors visited several properties in the Second and Fourth wards in an effort to secure suitable places for use as school rooms.

Speaking of the proposition this morning, one of the directors declared that the segregation of eighth grade pupils will probably be abandoned.

"There will be one eighth grade on the South Side and the other eighth grade pupils will be taught on this side of the river as was done last year."

Tonight's meeting will be held in the office of President P. E. Younk.

Will Soon Leave Hospital.

W. O. Schenover, who was operated on for appendicitis at the South Side Private Hospital, will leave there in a few days.

SHUPE PROPERTY IS SOLD TO DR. WOODS;
REALTY IN DEMAND*Unusual Activity of the Market Marks Midsummer
Season.*PROPERTIES CHANGING HANDS*Transactions are Principally in Dwelling and Building Lots. Foreclosure Sales Building Season for Late Fall and the Early Spring.

The property of the late Dr. Marcellus H. Shupe has just been sold to Dr. John F. Woods of Patterson avenue, who will occupy the premises in the near future. Dr. Woods gave two residence properties, one his home dwelling at the corner of Patterson avenue and Chestnut street, and the other a frame house on the latter thoroughfare, and a cash consideration which was not made public.

This transaction is one of several which have made the midsummer realty market one of the most active in recent years. There has been a brisk trade in residence properties and building lots. This latter movement indicates a busy building season, which will begin either in the late fall or early spring.

Edward Gallagher has just purchased a lot in the Bishop addition, on the South Side, and will erect a residence, as will J. J. Draper, who has purchased in the same subdivision.

Robinson & Coughenour have been buying properties for speculative purposes. The largest of their deals was that by which the Guller farm at Morrell was acquired some weeks ago. Manufacturing sites and building lots will be offered. This firm also obtained two coal alley properties from Dr. S. S. Stahl.

A property on Carnegie avenue also figured in a deal. It consists of a modern dwelling, upon a large lot, and was sold by William C. Bishop to Alfred J. Templeton.

In South Connellville, C. M. Evans secured two vacant lots from Mrs. Emma Coughenour. These will be held by Evans as an investment.

G. L. Gorham, of the West Penn, has purchased the modern dwelling on Vine street owned by Owen Murphy of Latrobe, and formerly occupied by him.

Among other sales that took place were the following: Seven room house on Fawcett avenue, sold by C. H. Bishop; lot on South Arch street, C. H. Bishop to Louis Vance.

CAMPERS HOME

Y. M. C. A. Youngsters Return from Indian Creek Valley Frolic.

Brown as berries and happy as larks after a three week outing on Indian creek, 26 junior members of the Y. M. C. A. returned to town this morning. All were pleased with the result of the trip, and declared it was the most successful conducted by the association.

The campers left Connellsville the last week in July, making their way to the site selected by Secretary E. T. Buer. Upon their arrival they found there was little for them to do other than enjoy themselves. The canvas had been erected and the cook shack prepared for the first meal by the advance guard.

Fishing, tramping on long hikes through the woods, games and varied amusements furnished so much entertainment for the youngsters that when night came they were always thankful to retire to their comfortable bunks.

Not an accident occurred to mar their enjoyment. The careful supervision of Secretary Buer kept the boys from harm. Ralph Moore, who assisted the secretary, returned home last night.

PARCEL POST CHANGES

New Regulations, Reducing Rates, are Effective Tomorrow.

The new parcel post regulations become effective tomorrow, when ship-ment of small packages and parcels will be made to Connellsville by the Pennsylvania Railroad. The maximum weight of mailable packages is increased from 11 to 20 pounds and the rate in the first two zones reduced.

Package mailed for delivery within the local zone will be accepted at a rate of five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional two pounds; for delivery within the first zone at five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound. Rates for greater distances are not affected.

Sues for Insurance.
UNIONTOWN, Aug. 14.—Mrs. Jennie G. Skinner of Connellsville, who is suing for the policy of Robert C. Greenleaf, has filed suit against the Royal Arcanum to recover insurance, amounting to $3,000 from May 18, 1913, the date of Mr. Greenleaf's death.

Leaves Estate to Children.
In the will of Sarah Detweiler of the West Side, which was probated yesterday, an estate of $1,550 is equally divided among the following children: Margaret Detweiler, Clyde Detweiler, Edith Detweiler, Lloyd Detweiler and Clarence Detweiler.

THE WEATHER.

FOURTH QUARTER COKE WILL COST $2.75 PER TON

Is Prediction of Merchant Coke Operator of This Region.

20,000 TON CONTRACT CLOSED

A Reaction in the Pig Iron Business Will Make Better Iron Prices and Thus Will Warrant Better Coke Prices; Good Time to Contract.

From The Weekly Courier.
UNIONTOWN, Aug. 14.—The Pittsburgh Coke Company has just closed a contract for 20,000 tons of furnace coke monthly for delivery during the balance of the year at $2.50. Merchant operators are not pressing contract coke as vigorously as they have been. They have every confidence in the future. This feeling was voiced by one of them as follows:
"We confidently expect a good market from September on to the close of the year. We cannot see how it can be otherwise. The market will reflect its strength in coke prices. We look for $2.75 coke by October 1st. This is a very good time for furnacemen who are still standing out to contract for the balance of the half. If they are willing to see what will happen, they had better not wait long; they might have to pay right. Pig iron stocks are the lowest in twenty years and furnace stocks are still going out. Steel-making iron is now practically exhausted. A reaction is inevitable and if the merchant iron men do not come in properly on the rise they must not expect the coke men to pay their freight bills. They can make their own situation. The foundation is now laid. The steel trade is slower to be sure, but it is still going up at a very good rate, fast enough to make a demand for pig iron that will start up some of the stocks now out and further stimulate the demand for coke."
"We have as far as possible adhered to the policy of stability and reasonable prices, but it is not always possible for us to keep prices on a reasonable level. You will recall that not long ago we had a $1 coke and better. The consumers made that price, not the producers. When prices fell widely for coke it is human nature for the producer to push up the price. The merchant operators have no combination. They are operating quite independently. There is no restriction on any of them when they are too sorely tempted to break at least the market price. All merchant operators are not millionaires and many of them believe they cannot afford to buy the coke when it is so cheap. It is a pity that they do not see the opportunity to buy when it is so cheap."

"A prominent coke broker is reported to be buying coke futures for the balance of the year at $2.10 net and to be taking some off credits at this price. This indicates conditions that the price will advance beyond $2.50. Otherwise there would be no inducement for him to buy at this price and in this manner. There is practically no stock in the market. The coal operators and shippers of the Kanawha field seek to have the Kanawha & Michigan and the Chesapeake & Ohio railroads establish a joint rate to Virginia points in the east and Cincinnati in the west."

ONE OF THE COMING BIG EVENTS IN THIS SECTION OF THE STATE

TYPICAL SCENE AT A REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA

THE forthcoming Chautauqua which is to be held here will be one of the big events of the season in this section of the state. The above photograph illustrates a typical crowd at one of the Redpath Chautauquas. There are today nearly 1,200 Chautauquas in the United States and Canada. In fact, the Chautauqua has become one of America's great institutions, and the idea has already spread to England and Japan. In 1872 there was not a Chautauqua in the world. In 1873 Bishop John H. Vincent and Lewis Miller inaugurated at the spot now called Chautauqua, N. Y., the original institution. Today Chautauqua, N. Y., is the summer center for 10,000 people, and its land, buildings and equipment represent a cost of millions.

But, although thousands of people go annually to Chautauqua, N. Y., from all parts of the United States, the great mass of American people would never get to a Chautauqua if they had to travel far from home. The recognition of this fact brought about the decision to take Chautauquas to the people everywhere. The movement a few years ago began to spread rapidly. Today there are operated from the Redpath headquarters in Iowa, Kansas City and Chicago nearly 600 Chautauquas. Only the best talent is engaged, as high as $15,000 having been paid by the Redpath for a single attraction for the Chautauqua season. Every year the number of Chautauquas grows, and there are more requests annually from towns wishing to be Chautauqua centers than can possibly be granted.

THE SIGN AT SIX

"The sign" she invited the guest to look at a wonderful time. He asked her to venture abroad, but she most particularly wanted to see the family come down."

"You are a singularly beautiful woman," observed Darrow in a detached manner, as he disposed his long form in the opposite armchair.

"The girl looked at him sharply. 'That is intended as an excuse or explanation—not in the least as a compliment,' Darrow went on.

"You would not be so obliging, if I were not beautiful," shot back the girl. "That is indeed not complimentary."

"I should be exactly as obliging," answered Darrow lastly, "but I should not feel so generally satisfied and pleased and rewarded in advance. I should have more of a feeling of virtue, and less of one of pleasure."

"I see," said the girl, her brows still level. "Then I suppose you are not interested in what I might ask you as one human being to another?"

"Pardon me, Helen," interrupted Darrow, with unusual decision. "That is just what I am interested in—you as a human being, a delicious, beautiful, feminine human being who could mean had the created universe to a lucky man."

"But not the whole," mused Darrow, smiling to his old, indolent attitude. "You see, I'm a scientist, for instance. You could not be a scientist; you have not the training."

"Nor the brain," interrupted Helen Warford, a trifle bitterly.

"Nor the kind of brain," answered Darrow. "I have enough of that sort myself," he added, he leaned forward, a hunger leaping in the depths of his brown eyes. "Helen," he pleaded, "can't you see how we need each other?"

"But the girl said both her eyes, and shook her head vigorously.

"Unless people can be everything to each other, they should be nothing—people like us," said she.

Darrow sighed and leaned back. "I feel that way, but the devil of it is I can't think it," said he. "Then after a pause: 'What is it you want of me, Helen?'"

"The Jack," said she.

"Where's the matter with Jack?" "Where's the matter with him?" he just out of college. This fall he must go to work. Father wants him to go into an office. Jack doesn't care much, and will drift into the office unless some body stops him."

"Well," said Darrow. "An office will ruin him. He isn't in the least interested in the things they do in offices, and he's too high spirited to settle down to a grind."

"He's like you in spirit, Helen," said Darrow. "What is he interested in?"

"He's interested in you," "What?" cried Darrow. "What is there a family trait?"

"He thinks you are wonderful, and he knows all about all your adventures and voyages with Doctor Scherman."

"He admires the way you look and act and talk. I suspect him of trying to imitate you," Helen's eyes gleamed with amusement.

Darrow smiled his slow and languid smile.

"The last time I saw Jack he stood six feet and weighed about one hundred and eight-five pounds," he pointed out.

"The imitation is funny," admitted Helen, "but based on genuine admiration."

"What do you want me to do with him?" drawled Darrow.

"I thought you could take him in with you; get him started at something scientific; something that would interest and absorb him, and something that would not leave all his real energies free for mischief."

Darrow leaned his head against the back of the chair and laughed softly. He long did his amusement continue that Helen at length brought him rather sharply to account.

"I was merely admiring," then exclaimed Darrow. "The delicious femininity of the proposal. It displays at once such really remarkable insight into the psychological needs of another human being, and such abysmal ignorance of the demands of what we are pleased to call science."

"You are the most superior and enterprising and concerted man I know!" cried Helen. "I am sorry I asked you, I'd like to know what there is so silly in my remarks!"

"Jack is physically very strong; he is most courageous; he has a good education, a gentleman's code, and an eager likable nature. I gather further that he does me the honor of admiring me personally. He has received a general, not a special, college education."

"Well," challenged Helen. "Helen, the last, these are exactly the qualifications of a good bull-terrier."

"Oh!" cried the girl indignantly, and half rising. "You are insulting!"

"Yes," smiled Darrow. "Yes, that's never to you, Helen, and you know it! I'm merely talking sense. Leaving aside the minor consideration that I am myself looking for employment, what use has a scientist for a bull-terrier? Jack has no aptitude for science; he has had none of the accurate training absolutely essential to science. He probably wouldn't be interested in science. At the moment he happens to admire me, and I'm mighty glad to admit that it is so. But that doesn't help. If I happened to be a sedulous man, Jack would quite as cheerfully want to be a barkeeper. I'd do anything in the world to help Jack; but I'm not the man. You want to hunt up somebody that needs a good bull-terrier. Lots do."

"I hate such a cold-blooded way of going at things!" cried the girl. "You show no more interest in Jack than I!"

Darrow smiled whimsically. "In deed I do, Helen," he said quietly; "that is why I don't want to touch his life. Science would ruin him quicker than an office—in the long run. What he wants is a job of action—something out West—or in the construction of our great and good city. Now, if I had a political pull, instead of a scientific twist, I could land Jack in a minute. Why don't you try that?"

"Father and McCarthy are enemies," she said simply. She arose with an air of weariness. "How dark it's getting!" she said, and pressed the electric button in the wall.

The light did not respond. "That's queer," she remarked, and pulled the chain that controlled the reading light on the table. That, too, failed to illuminate. "Something must be wrong with those things at the meter—what do you call them?"

"Gases," suggested Darrow. "Yes, that's it. I'll ring and have Blake screw in another."

Darrow was staring at a small object he had taken from his pocket. It was the electric flashlight he habitually carried to light his way up the three dark flights at his lodgings.

"Can't you see how we need each other?"

"I feel that way, but the devil of it is I can't think it," said he. "Then after a pause: 'What is it you want of me, Helen?'" of velocity into his pocket for his little flashlight. He gravely pressed the button of this; then abruptly rose.

"I must use your telephone," said he, without apology.

He was gone barely a minute; then returned to the table with a clouded brow. Almost immediately after the company had risen from the board, he unceremoniously left.

After he had assessed his coat, however, he returned for a final word with Helen.

"Where is Jack this evening?" he asked.

"Dining out with friends. Why?" "Will you see him tonight?" "I can if necessary."

"Do tell him to come down to my room as near eight o'clock tomorrow morning as he can. I've changed my mind."

"Oh!" cried Helen joyously. "Then you've concluded I'm right, after all?" "No," said Darrow; "but if this thing carries out to its logical conclusion, I'm going to need a good bull-terrier pup!"

CHAPTER V.

A Scientist in Pink Silk.

The next morning promptly at eight o'clock Jack Warford, in response to a muttered invitation, burst excitedly into Percy Darrow's room. He found the scientist, draped in a pale-pink silk kimono embroidered with light-blue butterflies, scraping methodically at his face with a safety-rasor. At the sight the young fellow came to an abrupt stop, as though some one had met him with a dash of cold water in the face.

"Hello!" said he, in a constrained voice. "Just up?"

Darrow cast a glance through his long silky lashes at the newcomer.

"Yes, my amiable young cousin, just up."

Jack looked somewhat puzzled at the appellation, but seated himself on the sofa, and waited for more.

"Helen said you wanted to see me," he suggested.

Darrow leisurely cleaned the component parts of his safety-rasor, washed and anointed his face, and turned.

"I do," said he. "If you're game."

"Of course I'm game!" cried the boy indignantly.

Darrow surveyed his fresh, young, eager face and the trim but bulk of him with dispassionate eyes.

"Are you?" he remarked simply. "Possibly. But you're not the man to be sure of it."

"I didn't mean it as bragging," cried Jack, flushing.

"Surely not," drawled Darrow, stretching out his long legs. "But no man can tell whether or not he's game until he's tried out. That's no reflection on him, either. I remember once I went through seeing my best friend murdered; being shot at a dozen times myself as I climbed a cliff; seeing a pirate ship destroyed with all on board, apparently by the hand of Providence; escaping from a big volcano built-up into a cave, and having the cave entrance drop down shut behind me. I was as cool as a cucumber all through it. I remember congratulating myself that, anyhow, I was going to die game."

"By Jove!" murmured Jack Warford, staring at him fascinated. Evidently, the super-beautiful garment had been forgotten.

"Then a warship's crew rescued me; and I broke down completely and acted like a silly ass. I wasn't game at all. I'd just managed to postpone finding it out for a while."

"It was just the reaction!" cried Jack.

"Well, if that sort of reaction happens along before the trouble is all over, it looks uncommonly like loss of nerve," Percy Darrow pointed out. "No man knows whether or not he's game," he repeated. "However," he smiled whimsically, "I imagine you're likely to postpone your reactions as well as the next."

"What's up? What do you want me to do?"

"Stick by me; obey orders," said Darrow.

"What's up?"

"Did you notice anything in the paper this morning?"

"They're full of this electrical failure last night. Haven't you seen them?"

"Not yet. While I dress, tell me what they say."

"The worst was in the tubes—Warford began, but Darrow interrupted him.

"I could tell you exactly what must have happened," said he. "If the fall wire was complete. Never mind that. Was the condition general, or only local? How far did it extend?"

"It seemed to be confined to New York, and only about to Highbridge."

"Long Island? Jersey?"

"Yes; it hit them, too."

"What are the theories?"

"I couldn't see that they had any—that I could understand," said Jack. "There's some talk of the influence of a comet."

"Rubbish! Who sprung that?" "Professor Atkinson, I think."

"He ought to know better. Any others?"

"I couldn't understand them all. There was one of polarizing the island because of the steel structures; and the—"

"No human agency?"

"What?"

"No man or men are suspected of bringing this about?"

"Oh, no! You don't think—"

"No, I don't think. I only imagine; and I haven't much basis for imagining. But if my imaginations come out right, we'll have plenty to do."

"Where, now?" asked Jack, as the scientist finished dressing and reached for his hat. "First of all."

"No, I ate that before I crossed. We'll make a call on the Atlas Building."

"All right," agreed Jack cheerfully. "What for?"

"To ask McCarthy if he hasn't a job for you in connection."

Famous Band Director.

BOHUMIR KRYL AND HIS TWO DAUGHTERS.

BOHUMIR KRYL, the famous band director and cornetist, who is to appear here Chautauque week, resides in Chicago. His two daughters are also musicians of great ability—Josephine, violinist, and Marie, pianist. In the accompanying photograph the noted band director is shown talking to his two daughters at home.

Jack came to a dead halt. "Say," he cried. "Look here! You don't quite get the humor of that. Why, McCarthy loves the name of Warford about the way a yellow dog loves a tin can to his tail."

"We'll call on him; just the same," insisted Darrow.

"I'm game," said Jack, "but I can tell you the answer right now. No need to walk to the Atlas Building. I have a notion the Atlas Building is going to be a mighty interesting place," said Darrow.

McCarthy threw back his heavy head. "That damn operator's been leaking!" he cried.

"So there are 'wiresless,'" observed Darrow. "No, your operator didn't leak. Who is he?"

"If he didn't leak, what did you say that for?"

"I'm a good guesser," replied Darrow enigmatically. "They say anything about a 'sign' being sent, and such talk."

"You've been getting the dope yourself out of the air," returned McCarthy snidely.

"Look here, my fat friend," drawled Darrow, his eyes half closing. "I'm getting nothing from anywhere except in my own gray matter. What do your messages have to say?"

"Should I tell you?"

"Because I'm interested—and because I know who sent 'em."

"So do I," snarled McCarthy, in a gust of temper.

"And I'm beginning to suspect he's a man to look out for. And I doubt if you'll ever find him. Of course, he's responsible for the row last night—as well as for the trouble in the Atlas Building the night before."

"I don't know whether he is or not."

"Oh, yes, you do; and I do; and the wireless man does. We're the only three. The rest of them are still figuring on comets."

"Well?"

"I don't suppose there's any real doubt left in your mind but that this man can turn the juice off again, if he wants to."

"I don't know as he did it," persisted McCarthy stoutly.

"Now, how long do you suppose you've last let the public should get on to the fact that this hidden power was going to exert itself again unless you left town?"

A slight moisture bedewed McCarthy's forehead.

"Not all your police, nor all your power could save you, if the general public once became thoroughly convinced that it was to go through another experience like last night's unless it ousted you. Why, a mob of a million men would gather against you in an hour. You see," drawled Percy Darrow, "why you'd better look after that wireless man of yours—and me."

"And you?" repeated McCarthy.

"What do you want?"

"I want to see those wireless messages, first of all," said Darrow, reaching out his hand.

McCarthy hesitated; then swiftly thrust forth the slimettes. Darrow, a slight smile curving his full red lips, held them to the light. They read as follows:

"McCarthy: A sign was promised you at six o'clock. It has been sent. Repeat and beware! Go while there is yet time."

"M."

There were four of these, couched in almost identical language. The fifth and last message was shorter:

"McCarthy: Free from the wrath to come."

"M."

"What," said Darrow, "is to prevent the other operators who must have caught this message from giving it to the public? What, indeed, is to prevent M's appalling direct to the public?"

"I don't know," confessed McCarthy miserably. "Do you?"

"Not at this moment. Will you send for the operator who took these?"

McCarthy snatched down the telephone receiver, through which presently he spoke a message.

"What have you got to do with this?" he demanded, after he had hung up the hook.

BIG COAL SHIPMENTS SHOW TRADE IS NOW PROSPEROUS

Shipment Operators Facing Greater Demand Than Ever Before; Conditions are Good.

Shipments of soft coal over the Baltimore & Ohio, the second largest carrier of bituminous, continue to show increase month by month. In fact, the June tonnage might be said to be the largest ever transported during a normal month. It was exceeded but once and that was in March, 1912, when there was an extraordinary demand for the product, due to the anticipated suspension of mining April 1 and also extra demand for tonnage for export due to a strike of British miners, which went into effect March 1. Tonnage during June was considerably above that of the same month last year and this indicates to what extent mines along this road produced coal, says the Coal Trade Journal.

Thus once more statistics bear out the statement that the demand for soft coal is greater than ever before, despite reports from various sections that tariff reduction, etc., has affected manufacturing plants to some extent. It is all the more remarkable that trade is in such good condition this year when there has been no strike or strike talk, to frighten consumers into putting in extra tonnage. In fact, talk has been such that many would naturally believe that tonnage would show a decrease, rather than an increase, when one considers how much has been said about factories working on reduced time, or shut down entirely for short periods, and the fact that there has been a shortage of labor in practically all fields.

also that what men are available take holidays whenever the opportunity offers.

While there may be a lull in transient demand at times, there is always a large tonnage moving on contract. In fact, larger than many are aware of, and the demand at present was never greater, which indicates that some strenuous times are to prevail in the soft coal trade before the end of the year and we may look forward to high prices for this grade of coal. Old established manufacturing concerns are surely not burning less coal than in previous years and the number of additions erected at established plants, and also number of new consumers building factories, etc., mean a larger consumption of the product.

Shipments over the Baltimore & Ohio during six months of this year and last were as follows:

Month	1912	1913
January	2,413,529	3,002,401
February	2,695,874	2,559,117
March	3,173,168	2,545,030
April	2,122,285	2,516,707
May	2,786,636	2,595,812
June	2,591,318	2,961,229
Total	15,812,753	16,665,938

June shipments over the Baltimore & Ohio, as on practically all of the other roads engaged in the transportation of bituminous coal, were above those of last year, amounting to 3,061,229 tons, an increase of 479,811 tons, or 16.1 per cent. Compared with tonnage for first half of 1911 the 1913 shipments were 682,070 tons, or 24.8 per cent. more, while compared with 1910 the increase amounts to 444,114 tons, or 18.9 per cent., and against that for June 1909, there was an increase of 1,131,311 tons, or 63 per cent.

Tonnages transported during the first half of the year were heavy, despite decreases in February and March, there being two months in which over 3,000,000 tons were carried. For the six months shipments amounted to 16,665,938 tons, which was an increase over that during same period of 1912 of 853,215 tons, or 5.2 per cent. Compared with 1911 the increase amounts to 2,731,091 tons, or 25.8 per cent., and compared with 1910 there was an increase of 2,437,405 tons, or 20.5 per cent., while compared with 1909 the tonnage shows an increase of 6,505,932 tons, or 64 per cent.

It will be noticed that this road is transporting practically two-thirds more soft coal than it did in 1909.
